1 Remember "Build Back Better"? Or "New Normal" Phrases that didn't accidentally transpire, but rather were pre-determined & agreed upon globalist talking points. How do you spot a Globalist? Well they sound like this:

2 The Globalists always tell people what their agenda is. Sure, it's wrapped in a barbed-wire-tight level of Orwellian double speak but nonetheless they will tell you: New Normal. Equity. Sustainability. Build Back Better, etc..

3  Although Biden likes to claim that "Build Back Better" was his brain child, it wasn't. It was made from the agendas of the World Bank and WEF.. We can see from the repetitious rhetoric what they have planned for the "new normal"/NWO

About the World Reconstruction Conference

The World Reconstruction Conference (WRC) is a global forum that brings together policy makers, experts, and practitioners from government, international organizations, Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs), the academia, and private sector from both developing and developed countries to come together to assess, and propose recommendations for disaster risk reduction and recovery in the wake of natural disasters. Traditionally, the WRC is organized by three partners (EU, UNDP/World Bank) in conjunction with the Global Platform for Disaster Risk Reduction. For the first time, the International Recovery Platform (IRP) will join UNDP/World Bank/Global Facility for Disaster Reduction and Recovery (GFDRR) and UNHCR to jointly coordinate the WRCs.

Personal View

March of 2020, The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation wrote an article in The Lancet concerning the WHO's agenda to counter "Disease X", Eager to plan the next pandemic while Covid-19 was just beginning.

Disease X: accelerating the development of medical countermeasures for the next pandemic

Shoma Sengar, Michael J. Karmyshin, Wafa Ghanem, Ajay Chakrabarti

WHO has listed several priority diseases with epidemic potential for which there are no, or insufficient, medical countermeasures. In response, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation (with support from PricewaterhouseCoopers) coordinated subject matter experts to create a preparedness plan for Disease X. Disease X is caused by Pathogen X, an infectious agent that is not currently known to cause human disease, but an emerging agent of a future outbreak with epidemic potential. The WHO has a special committee for action in medical countermeasures for the development and international coordination. We have also reviewed the platform and process improvements related to manufacturing, which could revolutionize the response to the next pandemic. Finally, we created several coordination and engagement guides. These guides range from the rational design of an international target product profile, to the key types of sources of medical countermeasures, and rapid development and regulatory review. In this Personal View, we provide a high-level summary of the outcomes of the medical countermeasures development workstream, intended for a broad audience including academia, medical countermeasure developers, and multilateral coordinating bodies. We hope that they might find this piece useful in prioritizing strategic investments and efforts to

- o What were the key challenges?
- o What scientific strategies could be improved?
- o What will the next pandemic look like?

On March 11, 2020, the World Health Organization (WHO) officially declared COVID-19 a global pandemic. This is the first time the world has declared a pandemic in its 75-year history, but it is not likely the last pandemic our world will experience. While the virus most certainly originated in animals, COVID-19 is a human-made, transmissible disease. This is the fifth emergence of a major zoonotic disease in the past decade alone. The One Health approach to respond to the current crisis has been hampered and stalled by siloed responses to emerging and highly transmissible infectious diseases.

Nearly 70 percent of new emerging human pather race is to other animals and the ecosystem. In short, the health systems and decision-makers have failed to educate themselves at the international level on what would be actions to take to prevent the next pandemic.

One Health recognizes that human, animal, plants, and environmental health are interconnected. It is a collaborative framework that brings together health officials, environmental scientists, and health officials at the local, regional, national, and global levels. Humans, veterinary, plant, and environmental health systems have historically functioned in isolation from one another. Barriers to sharing information,

Abstract

The biological attacks with powders containing Bacillus anthracis sent through the mail during September 2001 prompted the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and law enforcement agencies to reassess their roles in responding to bioterrorism. Following the recognition of the first cases of anthrax in Florida in October 2001, investigators from Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) were mobilized to assist in the investigation. The investigation was a joint effort between CDC and the FBI. Both health and criminal investigations have been conducted in concert in the past, the response to the anthrax attacks required close collaboration because of the immediate and ongoing threat to public safety. We describe the collaborations between CDC and FBI during the investigation of the 2001 anthrax attacks and highlight the challenges and successes of public health and law enforcement collaborations in general.

The Hegelian Dialectic

7 The goal is for these globalist terms and policies to quietly saturate the public & manipulate the governance of the globe. They agree to these agendas not in congressional hearings but rather in exclusive, invitation only conferences hosted around the world by think tanks.

8  We, in the public, aren't called to weigh in on these decisions & likely weren't considered in their decision making process except in their choice to NOT include us or any public scrutiny & laws. Aspen Institute, Milken, Sun Valley, SALT, Bilderberg, & WEF are just a few.
